The site is located to the northwest of Quarry Road and extends to approximately 0.17 hectares (0.42 acres).

It lies between existing residential developments at Wheatfields, Celak Close, and Longsfield. The site is predominantly vegetated, with a frontage of approximately 25 metres onto Quarry Wood, currently planted with several trees and a laurel hedge.

Vehicular access to the site is available via an existing access point onto Quarry Road.

A Public Right of Way (AE449) enters the site from Quarry Wood, runs behind the laurel hedge, and continues northeast through the residential development at Wheatfields.

The site is situated in the village of Aldington, which offers a range of local amenities including a well-regarded primary school, village hall with sports facilities, church, general store with post office, fresh foods store and pub.

Set within attractive Kent countryside, further amenities can be enjoyed at the nearby Evegat Business Park, while the A20 road connects quickly to the M20 motorway.

The market town of Ashford, around 7 miles away, offers extensive shopping, leisure and schooling, including the McArthurGlen Designer Outlet Ashford. High-speed rail services from Ashford railway station reach London St from 36 minutes. The area also benefits from a wide choice of schools in Ashford and Canterbury. The coast at Dymchurch is approx. 6.4 miles to the south.
